A Creed.

President Roosevelt to the catholic children of Washington—

"In the first place, the man must have the power to bear his own. You probably know that I don't care very much for the coward or the moral weakling. I want each of you boys, and the girls just as much, and each of you young men and women, to have the qualities without which people may be amiable and pleasant while things go well, but without which they cannot stand in times of stern trial. I wish to see in the man manliness, in the woman womanliness. I wish to see courage, perseverance, the willingness to work, to face, you men, if it is necessary, danger, the determination not to shrink back when temporarily beaten in life, as each one will be now and then, but to come up again and wrest triumph from defeat. I want to see you men strong and brave and, in addition, I wish to see each man of you feel that his strength and his courage but makes him the worse unless to that strength and courage are joined the qualities of tenderness toward those he loves who are dependent upon him and of right dealing with all his neighbors.
